Eris is culminating in this experimental scan made with one of our “Night and Day” house system simulators. While Eris was crossing the southern meridian, the Moon was conjunct Aldebaran in the 12th house. The side effect of the Night & Day house system research is that we can advantageously state the true positions for the planets. The database we loaded displays Pluto as dwarf planet; much as at NASA JPL HORIZONS.

As ours is the first great reformation of the zodiac after Hipparchus, one would expect news as concern house systems. If we decide to patent the Night & Day experiment we can offer some hints as to what happens to your horoscope next. In the beginning there were 22 IAU constellations of the zodiac. Then there was a dozen of new ascending constellations with a total of 16 ascendants for the current epoch. Now it seems we are about to redesign the house system. Our civilization will be very soon past any ecliptic system and albeit white tribes living among Cape Canaveral and Pasadena do not adjust to NASA skies, progress is inevitable. The Navajo will of course continue not needing NASA stuff at all, which is good for all of us, indeed. We are sort of doomed to technology for starters as we approach the Age of Aquarius in some 650 years from now.

what happened to your horoscope?

At first you had a “normal” horoscope, than all of a sudden all started to fall apart. Caught between Vedic and tropical, Navajo and sidereal options you decided to go for NASA. At least they know where your planets really are. Sun in Ophiuchus was next with Moon in Auriga and Venus in Pegasus. Soon you began to discover your true ascendants. Mine is Monoceros, hers is Hydra, and they all have Cetus rising and so on...

Eris Publications - New Editions 2006 - 2007

As the press got stuck and it can never stop, at the time many of you begin to learn about Eris, mostly by astrologers armed with yahoo search, we are completing our transneptunian series (some of them frozen potatoes are nicked “dwarf planets”) as well as the reformation of the zodiac, ascendant and all. We were busy while you were swimming, now perhaps it is our turn to plunge into some sidereal paradise. Did we say tropical?

Mercury Transit

The Mercury transit hits the U.S.A. chart once again in our update of the Mercury Transit edition series. This time 2003 UB313 is Eris over New York, the sequel to WTC. The rare event coincides with the U.S.A. elections as well as the events in Iraq.

Madonna

Neverheard. Hey, interesting chart! We decided to cover a couple of “important” stars. Such as Algol? No! Such as Madonna and the rest; the standard/boring array of trivial archetypes and human league of Barbie avatars with their imitations. It might just be the case that scientific astrology (Don’t laugh down there!) discovers occult facets to the immaculate stars of boredom. In fact there is Eris in this special position for ... we cannot disclose the victim but we must assume you got it. The term “scientific astrology” will make many of you (and us) laugh and that with good reason We were already accustomed to have astrology associated with black cats and lucky hare paws. You don’t laugh? Did I offend someone?

Ascendants Overflow

Speaking of hares there is one for astrology lovers, too. The constellation often mentioned is Lepus. Back at Eris Editions we don’t have problems with overabundance lately. 22 zodiacal constellations, 88 ascendants. Yes 88 since 16 for this epoch but many more for other epochs. One for you, one for the pharaoh, and a couple for me, too.

Me three actually since the author has been born with Hydra rising very close to Canis Minor and Monoceros. Get the picture?

We promise many pictures indeed as most of what we wrote we actually scanned. We can’t write the positions of the planets so we picture them in detail. In order to scan the skies we need much more material than any Vedic astrologer, that is for a meticulous scan Such as in cases of royal marriage.

We did not reply that letter because we can’t afford to. We are busy as the great year 2007 approaches with Jupiter in Ophiuchus and Venus in Hydra. You still there? Go grab your copy of Eris Informative Journal. Ups we disclosed another one. Basta. Stop. Ditto.
